The invocation was offered by R. Ray Gatewood, senior pastor, Bethesda Fellowship Ministry, Copperas Cove, as follows:

O Lord our God, how excellent is your name in all the earth. We first give you thanks for the benevolence which you bestow upon us each and every day. As our creator God, we reverence you, and we endeavor to invoke your presence in the halls of this assembly and in all that we do from this time forward. We pray, O God, that you will hear both our petitions and our words of thanksgiving as we come to you this morning in prayer.

Thank you Lord God for the standards of civility found in the halls of this institution. Thank you dear Lord for the sacred trust that you have placed in our hearts and the hearts of these legislators; a trust that guides our interactions with one another; a trust that forges friendships and relationships; a trust that continues to look unto you, the one who is the author and finisher of our faith. We pray now God, and we ask that you look upon us with divine favor.

Bless the many heroes of our land—the soldiers, sailors, airmen, marines, and coast guard personnel—who sacrifice their time, their efforts, and even their lives for the liberties and freedoms that we enjoy everyday. Look with divine favor upon those who protect us on our own soil, those in the person of police and fire personnel, border guards, and others who we depend upon for security. Grant them strength for another day.

Look with favor upon those who care for our children in school houses in this state and all across this country, for we know that their sacrifice is great.

We pray, O Lord, for divine favor, for the women and men who lead this great state, and especially the women and men of our Texas state legislature. We honor them for their hard work, and we honor them for their dedication to the people of whom they represent. We honor their commitment to duty. Grant them the wisdom to deliberate with all due diligence the courage to calculate the costs of every decision and the heart to hear and heed one another as they tackle the many tasks ahead. And God, when the gavel strikes ending this legislative session and the toils of these people have been finished, grant them peace of mind, a peace which surpasses all understanding. And reassure them now in their hearts, that as long as they performed their duties in a manner that is true; a manner that is honest and just; a manner that is pure, lovely, and of a good report, reassure them Father that they can rest easy knowing that their labors were not in vain. May God bless the great State of Texas, and may God bless America. Amen.

The speaker recognized Representative Delisi who led the house in the pledges of allegiance to the United States and Texas flags.
