This morning we celebrate another beautiful day in Texas. May we all reflect on the blessings we have and the friendships we are forming. May we serve our communities to the best of our abilities. When we feel overwhelmed with the responsibilities of the office, may we remember we are all human, and perfect doesn't exist. When we see suffering, may we reach out and offer hope and love. When we see success, may we celebrate and not envy. When we reach the end of our rope, may we find a friendly hand. Today, some of us will be traveling to College Station. May you have a safe trip to and from Kyle Field, and may you all remember, it's not whether you win or lose but who you play the game with. Let good sportsmanship shine from each and every one of you. May all your bones stay intact and your bodies stay unscathed. God bless you and me. Amen.
