O Holy One, whose name is often compassion and mercy, hear our humble prayer today. As we gather together in this chamber, help us to remember you and those we represent that we might with a righteous love be as grace-filled with our deliberations as if our beloved were here with us today. Make us to know the unity we seek is in the care of those who are in the most need. Create in us hearts of peace and understanding so that what we say and do may be pleasing in your sight. Forbid us to look upon sectarianism as if it were destiny. Help us to recognize the truth of every effort toward a common and compassionate good. As we do that good for the many, remind us that we are to first do no harm. Open our minds, our hearts, and our lives to a gracious unfolding of hope that as we make our decisions today they may become the arc of just-filled communities in this great state. Grant each one here gifts of fairness and sound understanding that we may be for one another, our constituents, and all of Texas examples of justice and mercy. For we pray these things, O Holy One, whose compassion and mercy now dwell with us and the business we have together. Amen.
