The chair recognized Representative Raymond who addressed the house, speaking as follows:

Yesterday, I filed two amendments to the sunset bill, two amendments, regarding Sunday sales of liquor. And in working with Mr. Paddie—and I did. I try to work with folks. I worked with Mr. Paddie. He said, "Please, can you pull them down or can you scale it back?" And I did. I pulled down one of the amendments in good faith. And when I brought the other amendment up, all of a sudden there was a point of order on the other amendment. We all do things differently. If it had been me carrying the bill and one of you all working in good faith with me, I would have said to the person offering that point of order, "Look, let him have his vote. He worked with us. He pulled down one of his amendments." That didn't happen, so you all didn't get to vote on it. So I'm bringing back the amendment that I had pulled down so that we have a chance to talk a little bit about this.

It does matter—if you've been here 25 years like I have and you believe, after you've heard from so many people in your constituency and other parts of Texas on an issue and you feel like, "I'm going to introduce this bill; I'm going to bring it to my colleagues"—I'd like to have a hearing on it. I've been here 25 years, and I couldn't get a hearing on the bill. Couldn't even get a hearing. And no, that isn't right. And I say this especially for the freshmen and the sophomores and the people that have been here three terms. You all are going to be running this place. Deal with each other in good faith, okay? If somebody's been here 25 years, they do a bill, they feel strongly enough, and they ask for a hearing, just give them a hearing. Let the people come up and talk about it. I'm a democrat. I am a proud democrat. I said yesterday that the Republican Party has their platform supporting my legislation. That matters. It shows you that there are some things that are not partisan, and this is one of them.

This amendment, it doesn't change that you have to be closed one day of the week if you're a liquor store. You're still going to have to be closed one day of the week. But what this amendment says is you get to decide which day of the week you want to be closed. I'd like it to be where you decide if you want to be open all seven days or just two days or three. But no, we're going to have some government regulation here, more than I think that we should have. But fine, I'm willing to compromise. This amendment simply says you've still got to be closed one day, but you get to decide which day you want to be closed. I look at these two guys over here—they're sophomores. Mr. Stucky and Mr. Lambert, 22 years from now when you've been here 25 years—old Stucky's chair of State Affairs or something and old Lambert after 25 years feels like he's got a bill he cares enough about to introduce. And Lambert says, "Hey, buddy, we've been here 25 years together, can I just have a hearing?" I'm pretty sure he's going to give him a hearing. But when that doesn't happen and if there's a sunset bill that's on the floor and the rules allow—the rules that we all voted for—allow us then to bring that issue before you, then we're going to do it. And yes, it's a harder bar I've got to deal with today because now it's two-thirds. Vote however you think is the right way to vote, that's all I ask of you, but look at the merits of it.

Amendment No. 1 failed of adoption.

The chair recognized Representative T. King who addressed the house, speaking as follows:

I wanted to talk a little bit about the process and about the bill, and I want to thank all of the committee members that worked hard on the TABC sunset bill and the Sunset members that worked hard on it over the last few years. I just wanted to take this opportunity to talk a little bit about several things—the three-tier system, the sunset process, and a little bit about a chairman's responsibility sometimes. It's no secret to a lot of my friends that I've served with that I'm not a big fan of the sunset process in general. Not because I don't think they do good work. It's just because of the way that it ends up playing out on the floor here at the house because you have an author that comes to the floor with a bill that he basically has to pass or an agency gets sunsetted. So he's at an unfair advantage to begin with. Yet you can't tell the members that they can't bring up an amendment to a bill, because that's a sacred right here in this particular body to bring up an amendment. You can make them file it early; you can make them prefile it; you can make it be germane—you can do all of these types of things. But at the end of the day, that author is burdened with the load of having to pass that bill. I don't know the answer to that, but it's been something that has bothered me for a long time on the sunset process, and there ought to be a better way to look at an agency and decide whether it needs to live or die without subjecting the author to all of the situations that come along.

If it was a regular piece of legislation, they could come up here and if it got loaded up with amendments, they could just kill their own bill. This particular bill had a sustainable point of order on it that was good on second reading. It's not good anymore because it's not a constitutional point of order. But even if you hated some of the stuff that went on it, you're not going to call it. Because in all likelihood we have to govern in this state, and we know what's going to happen with this bill like it does with many. It's going to go to the senate, and they're going to do whatever they're going to do with it. Then it's going to go to the conference committee, and they're going to do whatever they're going to do with it. And then it's going to come back to both bodies, and they're going to vote on it and decide whether TABC lives or dies. At the end of the day, that's the way it all happens. So you go through a pretty tough process. Now, when it's the Nueces River Authority sunset bill nobody really gets all excited about that, but TABC is something that's really, really important to us.

That being said, Representative Rodriguez yesterday did a magnificent job on his bill. He is a dear, dear friend of mine, and I have a great deal of respect for Eddie. So you say, "Well, where does Eddie get his hearing if he can't do it on a sunset bill?" Well, Eddie came to me early in the session—I'm chairman of that committee—and he says, "What do you think?" And I said, "Well, Representative Rodriguez, how many votes you got on this committee?" There's 11 members on the committee. And he said, "Well, I'll be honest with you, Chairman. I've got four on my best day." And I said, "Well, I appreciate your candor." And I would never expect anything else from Eddie because that's the reputation that he has garnered and that's why he's a great author. If you've got an amendment or a bill, Eddie is your guy because he has a great deal of trust in this body.

As chairmen, we use a lot of factors to decide what we're going to hear and what we're not going to hear, what we're going to pass and what we're not going to pass. I've served on several committees, and yes, a lot of it has to do with your personal philosophical belief or what the committee thinks about a bill. It has to do with scheduling. How many bills do we have to hear, how many days do we have to hear them, and those types of things, as well as a myriad of other things that come into play. So I knew that this bill wasn't going to get out of committee. We had a lot of legislation to consider, and so we didn't hear it. I also knew that whether that bill got out of my committee or not—our committee, I should say—that Representative Rodriguez was going to bring it to the floor, as he well should given the process.

Somebody said, "Well, you don't vote any alcohol bills." Well, this last time we moved 19 bills that made changes to the Alcoholic Beverage Code in some form or fashion. We moved Ms. Morrison's bill that allowed folks to sell beer at schools. Not during school activities and not to schoolchildren—somebody else had a bill that did that, there you go. We had a number of different bills that do it, but none of them are fundamental changes in the TABC code, no. The last time that was done was several sessions ago in 2013, I think—not sure of the year. But that's when we created a lot of the craft beer legislation that they're operating under now, which brings us to the three-tier system. Yes, it's been around for a long time, but there's a lot of institutions that have been around in our country for a long, long time, and that doesn't make them outdated. If you didn't have the three-tier system in the United States today—and every state has some form of tier system, I am told by TABC. None of them are exactly like ours, but we're proud to be unique in Texas. But the three-tier system, what it does is if you didn't have something like the three-tier system in nearly every state in the United States, the manufacturers—or the brewers or whatever title you give them—would control every single facet. They would control all the distribution. They would control all the retail. And they would have a virtual monopoly over the sales of alcohol in the United States.

So the three-tier is the very thing that allows craft brewers with an average 1,000 or 1,500 or 2,000 barrels a day to be able to do what they do and be the wonderful thing they are. And I love craft beer—too much a lot of times—and the men and women that are brewing craft beer are some of the greatest entrepreneurs we have in this country. And the people that represent them are certainly some of the most tenacious that I have ever run across, and they do a great job. But I'll just read one thing to you from the Texas Legislative Study Group, which I happen to think does a pretty good job most of the time. It's run by our good friend Garnet Coleman, and he's got a great staff that works on it. And on this particular amendment that Representative Rodriguez had, I'll just read the last part. It said, "this amendment would disrupt the three-tier system that has been working well and has allowed craft breweries, distributors, and retailers to all grow in the State of Texas." And so yes, sometimes regulations don't work the way we want them to because they're inconvenient. I serve on the Natural Resources Committee. And Chairman Larson's heard me say many times when somebody complains about a groundwater district being unreasonable—I say, "Well, that's just because they didn't tell you what you wanted to hear."

The three-tier system has a valuable purpose in the State of Texas. Over the years there's been amendments made. Now we have the brew pub provision that's in there which does allow, if you want to go through the paperwork—and Representative Rodriguez is right; it should not take 16 months to get a brew pub permit, and that's something that needs to be worked on. But if you have a brew pub license, you can brew the beer, you can distribute the beer, and you can sell some beer to go up to a 10,000 barrel limit. And then you kick into another category that goes to 225,000 barrels where you can't sell beer to go anymore but you can self-distribute. And after you get past that, you're one of the big boys, and you go into the conventional three-tier system where you can brew it, and somebody else distributes it, and somebody else gets the opportunity to retail it. So that's just a few things that I wanted to visit about on third reading. I'm for the bill, speaking on it here. I respect your attention, and I appreciate the work that Chris Paddie put on this. And with that, I appreciate your time.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS CALENDAR
HOUSE JOINT RESOLUTIONS
THIRD READING

The following resolutions were laid before the house and read third time:

HJR 145 ON THIRD READING
(by S. Davis, et al.)

HJR 145, A joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment authorizing the issuance of general obligation bonds to provide financial assistance to political subdivisions located in areas of the state affected by a disaster.

HJR 145 - STATEMENT OF LEGISLATIVE INTENT

REPRESENTATIVE SHINE: We spoke about the confusion yesterday because I think the dollar amount got people's attention. What's actually happening is we're looking at general obligation bonds for an issue with this HJR. This money can be used for any kind of disaster across the state not just for Harvey, is that correct?

REPRESENTATIVE S. DAVIS: Right. DRIP is a disaster response bill. It is not specific to flooding. So access to these funds will be for anyone in this state. Any of your districts that experiences a disaster that's declared by the governor—whether that's a hurricane, a tornado, a wildfire, any type of disaster—these funds are available.

SHINE: And these bonds are going to be issued as general obligation bonds for the State of Texas which will carry a AAA rating.

S. DAVIS: Correct.

SHINE: And that AAA rating means that we're going to receive the lowest interest rate that we can possibly get in the current market if these bonds are approved by the voters and they're actually issued?

S. DAVIS: Yes, sir.

SHINE: So we're striking the $4 billion. We're not going to be paying this out of the rainy day fund or the ESF. And we're going to go for $750 million, which is what your amendment does. And all this is really a perfecting amendment to make this legislation what you really intended for it to be in the first place.

S. DAVIS: That's correct.

SHINE: So it removes the language from the debt service for the ESF and actually puts it where the DRIP service is. And then a lot of this can be serviced by FEMA and other monies that are coming back to the state as well. Is that correct?

S. DAVIS: Yes, correct.

SHINE: So just to make it clear, that's $750 million. We're not looking at $4 billion, and we're not taking money for this out of the rainy day fund or ESF.

S. DAVIS: We are not servicing the bonds with ESF money.

SHINE: And a lot of this money is probably going to come back to service these bonds anyway from FEMA and other sources as well.

S. DAVIS: I believe so, yes.

REMARKS ORDERED PRINTED

Representative Shine moved to print remarks between Representative S. Davis and Representative Shine on HJR 145.

The motion prevailed.

Amendment No. 1

Representative S. Davis offered the following amendment to HJR 145:
