SENATE BILLS
THIRD READING

SB 29 ON THIRD READING
(Lozano and Gerdes - House Sponsors)

SB 29, A bill to be entitled An Act relating to prohibited governmental entity implementation or enforcement of a vaccine mandate, mask requirement, or private business or school closure to prevent the spread of COVID-19.

SB 29 - REMARKS

REPRESENTATIVE HINOJOSA: I didn't get to ask you these questions yesterday. I was preoccupied with other legislation that we were working on, and so if you wouldn't mind answering a few questions I have about this bill, I'd like to understand the intent behind why you brought this bill to begin with.

REPRESENTATIVE LOZANO: Yes, absolutely. At some point at the very beginning of the pandemic, there was what was beginning to be a patchwork of local mandates that were shutting down communities. This bill would prevent that patchwork from occurring. Essentially, Governor Abbott's executive orders GA-38 and GA-39—in other words, for the governor to continue to do those executive orders in the event of another COVID outbreak, this essentially would not require that anymore.

HINOJOSA: But aren't we still under the governor's executive orders for COVID in the State of Texas?

LOZANO: I believe we are still. This would relieve the governor of having to do that.

HINOJOSA: So you believe the governor has to maintain his broad power over our state, including the power to waive laws that this body passes, because local governments can require masks and shutdown government buildings temporarily to prevent the spread of COVID?

LOZANO: It wasn't just limited to that. Actually, it was shutting down economies. I mean we are talking $14 trillion of a loss to our GDP. It was a very difficult time for our nation and those lockdowns have not—the studies out there, there are studies on both sides. But by and large, the lockdowns that almost killed the hospitality industry, the cruise ship industry, the airline industry, shopping malls—it cost millions of jobs in a very short period of time. In the end, they weren't shown to actually have that much of an impact on the spread of COVID. This would prevent that. Now, I know at the very beginning the science was hit or miss. I have a family of doctors—my father and sister and family members—and there were people that were being put on ventilators for four, six, eight weeks. The minute you take them off that ventilator, their lungs can't keep up on their own. I mean it was ridiculous science that was being practiced—medicine in some areas—and everyone has learned from that. When we get to the economy, it is something we still have not recovered from. So this is geared toward the economic portion of another COVID pandemic. It's just to make sure that our economies are not shut down anymore.

HINOJOSA: But I know you would agree with me, would you not, that we would never put the economy over human lives—the lives of Texans and our families. Is that correct?

LOZANO: That's correct, but they are not mutually exclusive. We can keep our economy going strong and protect lives as well. And at one point they were choosing what at that point they believed was lives at the expense of the entire nation's economy. We almost lost all of our GDP but for government economic intervention which then led to the massive inflation we have today. There were so many mistakes made at so many levels. This is just to address not shutting down the economies again in a patchwork way and to ensure that private companies can still allow and require things in their premises. We took some amendments yesterday that allow not just nursing homes but also assisted living centers—these are confined populations of vulnerable people—to try to make this bill stronger.

HINOJOSA: And I appreciate that you have these carve-outs for hospitals and our prisons as well as our state-supported living center. I know we saw terrible spread of COVID and lots of deaths in these institutions. I appreciate that, but at the same time, I remember when COVID first hit. I remember being a mother terrified. We had no vaccines. We weren't quite sure even how it spread. I mean I remember Lysol-ing my packages that were delivered through the mail at the time. We didn't quite understand the science of COVID, but at the time it made sense. I think now we are used to living in this new era of this virus, and we are accustomed to what it takes. But then before we had all the answers, I appreciated, as a mother, my school district putting the lives of our kids and our families ahead of potential loss of learning, even. Because my first priority as a mother is to keep my child safe and alive. And so what concerns me about this bill is yes, we have vaccines today, and so far they are very effective, but what if this virus morphs into something that, again, we have questions about? What if it morphs into something that our vaccines can't protect us from? What if it morphs again into a virus that destroys families and takes our loved ones away? Why would we tie the hands of our local electeds to ensure that our public spaces are safe?

LOZANO: Well, first, I want to avoid a debate on the effectiveness of vaccines or masks. The studies show clearly that the benefit of wearing a mask is now proven to be negligible. Vaccines—the effectiveness of them preventing transmission, dropped from 91 percent to 60 percent. I will say, though, that when you have people that have preexisting conditions—they are up in age, they have respiratory problems already, like COPD—the vaccines did show that they were less likely to be going to the ER and less likely to die from COVID. But this bill is not about that. This bill is about the economy and ensuring that we don't deprive our region of the ability to generate the income it needs to pay for schools or to pay for public roads. When you shut down an economy—that is literally the lifeblood of that region. We can't have that happening in a patchwork way. We have to have everyone sailing in the same direction. And if you cannot—if you are guessing at it, it is going to be a disaster. That's what happened—no one knew. Now, we have variants coming out from COVID, and the variants show that with each variant the vaccine is less effective, but this bill doesn't address the health aspect. The World Health Organization and the CDC have declared that COVID is no longer a pandemic, but you look at our chamber and we still have the little sanitizer bottles around. There's communities and private companies that can still take the measures they want, but we cannot shut down our economies. Our kids cannot shut down their schools. Look at what's happening to our kids. The mental health from them not being in a socialized atmosphere is something that I don't know if they will ever recover from. So these executive orders prevented that. We want to make sure the governor doesn't have to keep doing executive orders and that this is codified in the law. And just to protect our economy, which by and large will protect our people.

HINOJOSA: But I remember specifically when we were at the height of COVID, we had outbreaks in certain regions of this large state that were specific to, for instance, El Paso went through a terrible outbreak where they had bodies collecting of community members who had died because they could not bury the bodies fast enough. In the Valley, we had a similar experience of an outbreak that locals could not keep up with. And so doesn't it make sense to have our local electeds respond—

LOZANO: This bill does not apply to measles. It only applies to COVID. The World Health Organization deemed COVID-19 is no longer a public health emergency.

SB 18 ON THIRD READING
(Kuempel - House Sponsor)

SB 18, A bill to be entitled An Act relating to the tenure and employment of faculty members at certain public institutions of higher education.

SB 18 - REMARKS

REPRESENTATIVE KUEMPEL: The tenure bill that will provide structure and transparency of our expectations.

REPRESENTATIVE ZWIENER: Representative Kuempel, I know there's been a lot of—to use a phrase from last night—gnashing of teeth around this legislation, but I just really wanted to ask you about some questions I've heard from faculty at different institutions here in Texas, both Texas State and The University of Texas. What I have heard from folks, particularly department chairs, is that when they are interviewing people who are interested in returning to Texas, the question of this pending legislation and all its variants has been a factor in people choosing whether or not to come to Texas. How do you think this legislation, as it leaves the house, is going to affect whether or not Texas universities can recruit people to come here?

KUEMPEL: Yes, ma'am. I would like to say I heard some of that same conversation with some of the involvement I've had with faculty from around the state. Certainly the uncertainty of tenure—what was being conversed—what was just thought of being taken away out there. It's certainly probably had a negative impact on the decision of some folks, to your point, that were looking to come work in the State of Texas. I think as it's leaving the house, we've re-instilled and put that certainty back in it by saying that there will be tenure. There will be a very transparent process of how that tenure is awarded and how that tenure is reviewed. Like I said, it provides certainty as it leaves here.

ZWIENER: Your hope is that this won't harm Texas recruitment efforts?

KUEMPEL: Correct.

ZWIENER: If we discover that this bill does harm recruitment efforts, can we who are concerned count on you to be an open door for us to talk about fixing this in the future?

KUEMPEL: Certainly. I mean, that's a part of the legislative process. As we go through the interim—Ms. Zwiener, you're aware as well as I am that everything we do in here—there's interim and interim charges and certainly have what issue it may be come back the next session and fine-tune something that we may have done just to make sure we get it right.

(Goldman in the chair)

REPRESENTATIVE DUTTON: Chairman Kuempel, I know there's been a lot of discord about this bill, but I went back and read it again. What actually does the bill do that's different than being done today? I mean, substantively.

KUEMPEL: Nothing, Mr. Dutton. I think everything that we are laying out that we have in front of us right now is the basic tenure structure that's being implemented right now in our larger universities, and frankly, in most of the universities across the state.

DUTTON: Right, well that's the way I looked at it, and I couldn't figure out what the discord was about because it doesn't do away with tenure at all.

KUEMPEL: No, sir.

DUTTON: It seems to set up some ground rules for tenure that already exist.

KUEMPEL: And it provides that certainty. It's as beneficial, in my opinion, for the faculty. They can see something in statute that says that's the way this works, and that's the way it's going to work.

DUTTON: That's the way tenure—we always thought it worked that way. And it seems to me that somehow or another this has been made out to be something that it's really not.

KUEMPEL: I'd agree with you, Mr. Dutton.

DUTTON: Because, you know, universities and colleges have the ability to contract with employees, right?

KUEMPEL: Yes, sir.

DUTTON: That contract—generally, contracted employees can only be terminated with good cause, and that's the same thing in this bill, right?

KUEMPEL: Yes, sir.

DUTTON: Okay, thank you for explaining that to me.

KUEMPEL: Yes, sir. Thank you, Mr. Dutton.

DUTTON: I thought I'd been misunderstanding the bill.

KUEMPEL: No, sir. It's just as plain as you read it.

DUTTON: Yes, and so I would encourage people to take a look at the bill because I think that everybody ought to be for this bill.

KUEMPEL: Thank you, Mr. Dutton. I agree with you. Everybody should be for it.

DUTTON: On the other hand, I was asking my staff if we have heard from any college professors in opposition to this bill. You know what they told me?

KUEMPEL: I'm guessing they hadn't heard from anybody.

DUTTON: Exactly, we had heard from zero college professors about this bill. Neither had we heard from any university presidents about this bill. So I think it's a bill, as I read it—it seems to me that it's a bill that ought to be. That if we are going to do anything, this is probably what we ought to do.

KUEMPEL: I agree, thank you.

DUTTON: Thank you, Mr. Chairman.

REPRESENTATIVE COLE: I want to thank Mr. Kuempel for bringing a bill that preserves tenure. I still must speak in opposition to this bill. The senate, I think, dislikes higher education. They brought a bill to dismantle tenure. Now, we all know how important our universities are to the State of Texas, which is why we have put considerable dollars into their functioning and well-being. We help the community colleges, and we help many colleges. I want to thank Dr. Bonnen for recognizing the need to fund additional colleges in your appropriations process, along with all of the members of the Appropriations Committee—in particular, Mary González, who has fought tirelessly in the Higher Education Committee against this bill.

We had numerous testimony against this bill from students, faculty, and from a number of our colleges. But in particular, students showed up from The University of Texas where I attended. My father did not want me to go to UT. He was concerned about their history of racial discrimination. It was actually my grandmother, Willie Mae Bailey, who stood up and said she's going to UT. She did that because the family she worked for, the Prothro family—that I'm sure I've talked to Representative Frank about considerably—for whom she worked for 30 years had gone to The University of Texas. They had sponsored a scholarship called the Century Club Scholarship which I received when I went to UT. This family owned a ranch and they gave us clothes and really supported me and my cousins as we were growing up. They were UT graduates. Joe Prothro was the senior member of this family, and my grandmother worked for his son, who we called Little Joe.

I went to The University of Texas on a scholarship called the Texas Achievement Award, and that scholarship wasn't much, but it made the difference in my ability to go and stay there and perform. I was really excited when I got this scholarship because I knew it was the vehicle for me to be able to attend UT. Many other African American and Hispanic students throughout the state received this scholarship, and it made a difference in their ability to attend. I was a member of the National Student Business League when I first went to UT, and I went on to become president of that organization. It was the organization for business clubs for Black business students to actually be able to gather and associate together to perform activities that helped us with our culture at the campus.

DUTTON: You know, I have a great deal of respect for you, and I was trying to figure out what the actual opposition to the bill is because, when I read it, I don't see any violence in the bill to what's being done today or that it would hurt or improve the chances for, say, Black professors at The University of Texas. I don't see where it hurts. Can you tell me where you see that it actually causes harm to our system today?

COLE: I'll admit to you, Representative Dutton, that it is a much improved bill than what the senate passed, but it still hurts minority professors in its vague language of not defining why they can be discharged. Also we've had testimony about how these professors do not make up any recognizable percentage of tenured faculty.

DUTTON: I think the bill says you can be discharged for good cause of course, of course that's what the current standard is. I'm not so sure, as I understand it, the Black professorship under tenure at The University of Texas, for example, is probably less than four percent. Is that your understanding?

COLE: It is my understanding that it is a small number, but I'm not aware of the exact percentage.

DUTTON: Admittedly, I don't think this bill helps that, but I'm trying to understand how this bill would hurt that.

COLE: Well, it's suppression of academic freedom. In the United States, over 800 colleges and universities have adopted principles of academic freedom and tenure jointly formulated by AAUP and organizations representing university administrations. Tenure is necessary to guarantee academic freedom, which is freedom from censorship by the institution of the government, so that Black professors that are tenured faculty at UT are suppressed in their academic freedom. They are not given enough leeway to practice their profession.

DUTTON: How does this bill affect that freedom? Maybe that is where I am missing it?

COLE: This bill makes the likelihood of being censored for academic freedom more likely. It impacts minority professors in that it is not clearly defined how their academic freedom can be expressed.

DUTTON: You think that is a different standard than exists today?

COLE: Yes. I think the bill not defining academic freedom makes it more difficult for minority professors to practice their professorship.

DUTTON: I'm not quite sure I agree with you, but I do agree that something ought to be done to improve the percentages of Black faculty members who have tenure. You don't think this current bill actually creates a bar to increase the number of Black professors at UT under tenure, but it will somehow create another for them to be dismissed? Is that what I understand?

COLE: My objection is that it is a solution to a problem that we have, but it doesn't clearly address that problem. We have a problem with the number of minority professors at our institutions and, as you pointed out, The University of Texas only has 0.04 percent African American tenured professors.

DUTTON: I'm really unsure of how this bill affects that?

COLE: This bill doesn't clearly lay out measures by which the faculty members of the African American, Latino, veteran, and disabled communities numbers can be increased. If we're going to pass a bill dealing with tenure, then we need to have at least a study by the Higher Education Coordinating Board of a plan of action to increase the number of minority and underserved communities' tenured faculty.

DUTTON: I looked, and I may have missed it, but I didn't see where any number of faculty testified against the bill.

COLE: We had a number of faculty come.

DUTTON: Black faculty members is what I'm talking about.

COLE: We had a Black faculty member who's in charge of the diversity, education, and community engagement department at The University of Texas who came to testify on the bill. As you know, if they are a public university or a public institution, they cannot testify.

REPRESENTATIVE MORALES SHAW: I was interested to see the impact of this bill, so I did some research. I want to share some of the findings with you. Less than a quarter of faculty are full-time tenured professors is what exists today. It's not even a majority. In 2021, about 17,000 faculty members in Texas were tenured, but there are about 7,600 who are on the tenure track. This means that these are professionals who have dedicated their careers under a set of known rules. That could be 10 years, 15 years, or 20 years. Nonetheless, they have dedicated their careers to this teaching profession under a certain set of rules that will no longer exist.

What that means to me is that their professional, familial, and personal investment in their own career has potentially been wasted at a time when there is so much lack of long-term work commitment. I think we all hear about that—how people leave jobs, there's a lot of turnover, we don't have the same pension and retirement systems that we had before—so we hear a lot about that. At a time when there is so much of that long-term work commitment, we're jeopardizing job security and a promise of long-term employment for these professionals. At a time when we need diverse views—at a time when it's critical, more than ever, that we have diverse views—this bill jeopardizes the academic freedom and the right to research without fear of influence or retribution. At a time when we can no longer look for longevity in many professions because of what I just mentioned, this bill hinders the quality that only many years of experience can bring.

Think about those years of experience that those professors have and the value that brings to the student body when they turn to those professors for guidance and help. It's very similar to this body, the longer that we're here the more advantageous and beneficial it is to our constituents. It's also beneficial to their own colleagues and the bodies that they serve with. And frankly, it's really beneficial to public debate on major issues. A lot of time when we're listening to wherever we get our news sources—hopefully a variety—we hear, oftentimes, that professors are tapped into—and these are senior-most professors—on critical issues. It could be international affairs, it could be domestic affairs, but they chime in to these things.

Texas is among the largest and influential states, yet like in many critical areas—education and health care—we don't rank the highest. Well, the same goes for tenured salaries. Among the top five states with many professors, Texas doesn't rank there. It ranks lower than in the top five. I'm not sure what this bill addresses. This bill, however, is a form of censorship, deprivation, and devaluation of the things that our communities need the most. For that reason I oppose this bill.

REPRESENTATIVE ROSENTHAL: Members, if I could have your attention for a minute, please. I'm not speaking just to speak, and I'm not here just to waste time. This is very important to me and my family, and probably other families. I'm going to talk about my family and my dad a little bit, so I would really appreciate your attention.

Tenure is the privilege of continuing to work as a faculty member without periodic reappointment. It doesn't mean you can't be fired. It doesn't mean you'll never be evaluated. Currently, tenure allows faculty to pursue research without being subject to political pressure, and this bill will destroy that. It'll create an environment where tenure is only awarded to people whose views align politically with whomever holds current leadership. I want to let you know that I would not be standing here and I would not be in Texas today if it wasn't for the tenure program at The University of Texas at Austin.

My family came here during the middle of a decades-long effort to improve and upgrade our university standings here in the State of Texas. My father, who passed away about 18 months ago, was a singular talent. He grew up in a remote part of North Dakota. He was a prodigy. My father was a mathematics genius. And at 16 years old, from the most barren, rural part of North Dakota you can imagine, he won a National Merit Scholarship, and he went to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology where he graduated summa cum laude. Then he went to Stanford University to do his graduate work. This was all during the '60s. By the time we got into the '70s, he was teaching at a top tier school—the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign. It was The University of Texas that offered him a tenure-track position to come here to improve the standing of the mathematics department. In 1979, we moved to Austin. My father soon became tenured and then went on to be the first endowed professorship offered at The University of Texas Department of Mathematics. He was, for 20-odd years, the John T. Stuart III Centennial Professorship in Mathematics at The University of Texas at Austin. Students came from all over the world to learn from my dad. At his retirement and his memorial services, former colleagues and students told me stories about how my dad's influence made such a big difference in their lives. Some of them told me that learning from him changed the direction of their careers.

The point, members, is that Texas universities are now very highly regarded, but it wasn't always that way. Before the effort to upgrade our university standings, Texas universities were best known for their football programs—which is all well and good. But now, my bachelor of science in mechanical engineering degree from The University of Texas at Austin is seen as prestigious. It has helped open doors for me in the industry as I built my career. That simply would not have been the case if it weren't for the prestige and standing of our schools. Tenure programs play a huge role in this. Tenured employment is crucial in upholding standards of teaching and research within our universities. It's vital to the Texas economic miracle. The value of tenure cannot be overstated in higher education.

As Texas continues to grow, we need a well-educated society and electorate. We need a well-educated workforce for our political and economic success. Without the assurance of academic freedom, highly qualified and sought-after academic candidates are much less likely to seek employment here in Texas. This would give other universities in other states a competitive advantage in recruiting top faculty. SB 18 raises the risk of losing institutional status and rankings, and it would jeopardize certain federal funding and dampen student enrollment. Renowned faculty members, like my dad, with international recognition will more easily be attracted to leave and move out of the state.

Members, you should know that my father maintained a federal grant from the National Science Foundation. For 40 years, every school that he taught at benefited from that, including The University of Texas at Austin. Without tenure, we will erode our technical workforce capability. It's the path we're on. I know that we have home-grown talent. I want to defer to my admired and esteemed colleague, Dr. Glenn Rogers, when he spoke about this yesterday. I think we can all agree that very talented folks come from many backgrounds and areas. Talent is not exclusive to our colleges and universities. I promoted a non-degreed engineer to run a department and I had a PhD guy, who was in my face about that, quit our company because I selected a non-degreed engineer, but that is not what we are talking about. This is not about a person's worth or value. We should welcome the talent of all types because folks with different skill sets and backgrounds are all important. We have room for everybody in Texas. This bill will degrade our ability to attract top-tier academic talent, and it will put Texas universities at a disadvantage competitively with other states. It's bad for Texas, and I will urge you to vote no on SB 18.

REPRESENTATIVE M. GONZÁLEZ: What kind of university do you want your children, your grandchildren, and your great grandchildren to go to? Do you want them to go to an institution that has world-class scientists, the people who are trying to cure cancer? Do you want them to be mentored or work collaboratively with educators who are at the forefront of creating the technological world we live in—who are building and creating new technologies like AI and even things that we don't even have the understanding of today? How do we create those universities? How do we create these world-class institutions?

We allow them to exist by having all the resources and support systems that universities need to thrive. And for 100 years, one of those mechanisms has been tenure. You see, professors aren't making millions and billions of dollars even though they are some of the brightest minds in the country. Instead, they say, "I am committed to social good and research and development, but in order to do that research and development, I require some type of academic freedom. I require some type of security." Tenure has allowed for our universities to be competitive. More than 1,200 U.S. colleges and universities offer tenure to their faculty. What will be the outcome if we take away tenure from our state institutions?

Members, we do not live in a silo. In fact, we are part of an actively competitive global economy. If we don't understand the economics or the competition that exists, then we will not be able to compete on this level. We know that part of the reason that our flagship universities are doing so well is because of tenure track. In fact, about 50 percent of UT faculty is tenured or on tenure track. About 70 percent of A&M faculty is as well. These things are not an accident or a coincidence. These are flagship universities because this tool is vital to the facilitation of world-class institutions. Members, we must remember that we live in a global society. We must remember that we are competing with the New Yorks, the Arizonas, and the Washingtons. Let's even go outside of the United States—with the Oxfords of the world. When we take away this tool and other institutions, other states, and other countries are not, we are tying the hands of our institutions.

This bill would end the system of tenure in Texas as we know it and make future generations of professors vulnerable to being punished by the state for sharing their knowledge and expertise with students in public institutions of higher education. Should we not agree, or probably more importantly, understand the content of their scholarship and work? This bill will pull educators and students from Texas because we cannot provide them with what they need to be successful in our higher education world. Members, we are doing a lot of legislation that will have a vital impact on the future of Texas. More importantly, this will change our institutions as we know it for the next generation. What do we owe future Texans? With that, I urge you to vote no.

REPRESENTATIVE J.E. JOHNSON: Hook 'em Horns! Oh, that got your attention. Hook 'em Horns! You know, Texas has wonderful universities—three arguably flagship universities in The University of Texas, Texas A&M, and Rice—where we attract the best and the brightest minds in our professors. But what many of you may not know is that both of my parents were university professors. Both of my parents received tenure. I remember very clearly what it was like when I was a little girl and my dad came home from Auburn University so proud—because he could provide security for his family because he was a tenured professor—of what he had done to achieve that rank. Then I had the privilege to see that again in my mother. She went back and got her PhD while I was in law school and ultimately retired from the University of Connecticut in Educational Leadership. I remember when she got tenure. We had a family celebration and a dinner because what it meant was both of my parents had academic freedom. They had security of thought. They had the ability to do research, to test ideas, and to challenge our upcoming thinkers—the students of tomorrow, the leaders of our future. That's what tenure does.

Our academic institutions are places that cultivate and incubate new ideas and new thoughts that push our society and our culture forward. Having places where our students can challenge existing thought, develop critical thinking skills, and push our society and culture in new directions. We can't have that if we're going to be subject to the political whims of legislatures, university presidents, trustees who are subject to political ideologies, or donors. This bill is arguably one of the most harmful that this legislative body is addressing this session. When we stifle the intellectual development of our young people, when we limit research possibilities of our society, when we inhibit the free exchange of ideas—whether you agree with me or you disagree with me—the fact is that both sides are safe to express their ideas and their thoughts. When we inhibit the free exchange of ideas, we take our civilization and our society back in unprecedented levels. Members, this bill is about academic integrity. It's about academic freedom. It's about the right to learn, it's about the right to challenge, and the right to express frustrations with our current society. It's about the right to explore what's good about the past, what's bad about the past, and challenge our directions in the future. This bill is so harmful to our state to be able to attract the best and the brightest minds—the best and the brightest students and the best and the brightest faculty.

I've had the privilege to tour several of our universities. The University of Texas at Dallas, for example, they have amazing research programs. And what they're doing—amazing programs with academic and private partnerships in really challenging the technology for health care, science, and everything else. One of the reasons they're able to do that is because of tenure. Because our research professors have the security of their position to challenge notions and push the bounds of all that we can come up with. Members, I strongly encourage you to vote against this bill. This should not be a partisan checklist. This is about the future of our state, the future of our people and our young people, and their right to learn freely. Thank you.

REPRESENTATIVE WU: Your district—the people you represent, the area you're from—there's a lot of high tech in that area right?

J.E. JOHNSON: Absolutely, my district is also full of very smart people.

WU: There's a lot of businesses and industries that produce high-income jobs and provide a lot of wealth for this state, correct?

J.E. JOHNSON: Absolutely.

WU: Would it be fair for me to say that those high-tech industries would not have come to this state if we did not have the academic infrastructure to support their industry, to provide them their labor, and to support their intellectual firepower that they need for those industries? Is that right?

J.E. JOHNSON: Absolutely, one of the things that this body has discussed through all of the educational programs—you know, through Representative VanDeaver's community college program for example—is are we providing academic curriculum that trains the workers of the future? We have a lot of public-private relationships with big employers for our community college structure to make sure that we are training the employees of the future and that we're educating them to be able to be innovative, critical thinking developers to come up with the next greatest thing. It's so important that we continue to do that as a state.

WU: My district is neighboring one of the other Representative Johnson's district—Ann Johnson—and her district has the largest medical center in the United States. One of the absolute premier medical centers in the entire world would not exist if we did not have the universities and the intellectual capacity to support them. Would that be fair?

J.E. JOHNSON: Absolutely. You know, medicine is one of the leading areas that had benefitted from academic research. It is really pushing the bounds at our medical schools along with our traditional four-year institutions.

WU: Right now, our state is having a huge problem recruiting doctors, nurses, and other white-collar staff to fulfill the needs of our state, right?

J.E. JOHNSON: Absolutely, we are definitely having a job training problem. We have a workforce shortage, and so many people and businesses are having a difficult time hiring an appropriately educated workforce. That is why we need to be expanding every type of educational opportunity that we can, not limiting it.

WU: If we reduce—even at least in the eyes of the public around the nation—if we reduce the ranking or the perceived ability of our institutions to provide world-class education, that will probably result in students not wanting to come to Texas or not wanting to stay in Texas for their education, would that be fair?

J.E. JOHNSON: Not only that, but The University of Texas has one of the largest faculty endowments. For decades now, they've gone back and forth with Harvard for who has the largest endowment. Part of that is for tenured professors and full professor chairs. This bill will substantially limit Rice, UT, and A&M from recruiting the leading faculty and the leading thinkers across a variety of disciplines. That will really inhibit the kind of students we can attract. When you have the best and the brightest, you have options. You can go anywhere. There's wonderful universities across this country. If the State of Texas is going to be competitive to attract the best faculty and the best students because we have the best faculty, then this bill cannot pass.

WU: My concern is even though people have said, "Oh, this bill doesn't do that much." But even if this legislation creates the perception that Texas is no longer friendly towards academic freedom and will not protect you—if you're a professor that you may or may not have tenure or whatever it is—that even if that perception is there and professors don't come here and students see that and those students decide not to come to our schools in Texas, that means we may be cutting off our own employee pipeline—our own tech pipeline. Would that be fair?

J.E. JOHNSON: Absolutely.

WU: Voting against this legislation would be about not just protecting our academic freedoms, but about protecting our state's own economy—something that we talk about here incessantly.

REPRESENTATIVE J.D. JOHNSON: I really want to know how we got here. I've heard a lot said about this particular bill, and I've talked to many of you and to many of my republican colleagues, and I asked you one simple question. That was, "Why are we doing this?" I got a variety of different answers. Many of those answers were surrounding too much money, saying professors are not teaching, claiming the bill really doesn't do anything, and saying these teachers are teaching the wrong things. They're all over the place. It's interesting that if this bill really doesn't do anything, then why are we doing it?

This is once again one of those times we're going to overregulate or we're going to over-legislate nothing if this bill doesn't do anything, and we allow universities to do what universities need to do. Often—or all the time—we pass bills and we go to those special interest people because they come to us and say, "Hey, we have a problem and we need it addressed." But I talked to many of the universities and none of them said that they asked for this to happen. None of them said that this was even necessary. So the question has to be how did we get here? The conversation happened over and over and over again. Why is there an attack on education? How, all of a sudden, after all of these years of tenure being in place, is it now important that we start to regulate professors? We're even starting to regulate teachers. It's all based on what everybody knows and that is the "leftist ideology that is permeating the walls of the institutions of higher education and our schools and indoctrinating our children." When in fact that is the direct opposite.

We don't want to overregulate education. We don't want to overregulate what our children, and how our children, think. I wish I could regulate how some of you think because your ideologies and your thought processes are way out of control. You're saying that you believe in law and order and you don't want to be overregulated, and here we are overregulating. We heard and watched as every single day we're banning books and now—because we're trying to make sure that we're putting a certain ideology in place. If the left's ideology is so bad, how is not the right ideology good? Because it's not. It's simply not. The ideology is out of control. Most of you don't even believe in half the bills you vote on, and yet you still do it because you're being told to.

We don't know what this bill does. There is an attack on primary and secondary schools where we know there is a teacher shortage. There is a teacher shortage, and everybody says they care about education, but you don't care enough to make sure we're taking care of the teachers that are teaching our elementary, middle, and high schools. And now that wasn't enough. Now you want to attack professors. Let's attack professors, and let's attack how they teach. Because if, in fact, they start to teach critical race theory, we need to reevaluate them and get them out. The president and the Board of Regents can already do what you are saying you are trying to do with this bill.

So why are we doing it? Once again, overregulating and legislating nothing. I want to just say this as I simply close because I don't want to take a lot of time. The pendulum will swing back and every harmful, hateful, idiotic bill that you put forth that is overregulating everything, rest assured, it will come back and get you. You will reap what you sow. Be mindful of all the things that are happening as we are passing these bills to overregulate and over-legislate everything in this building. That pendulum will swing and you are going to cry and say, "This is wrong."

REPRESENTATIVE COLE: Representative Jarvis Johnson, are you aware that SB 16 regulated critical race theory—banning it from our colleges?

J.D. JOHNSON: Yes, ma'am.

COLE: And that bill contained language that is in this bill, are you aware of that?

J.D. JOHNSON: Yes, ma'am.

COLE: Can you tell us if there's any coherent definition of critical race theory?

J.D. JOHNSON: No, ma'am. It's a theory. That's why it hurts my brain to continue to talk about a theory. That's why you go to college—to be a critical thinker, to think critically and not to think singularly, not to think just one way, but to have a broad perspective of life. And that is in everything. It is a thought of identifying problems that may have existed, finding out what those problems are, and addressing them. Somehow people have taken critical race theory as an attack on the white race. It's not. Not at all. It is simply an ideology of thinking about how race is a factor in this country—all races. Not just one race, but all. It may be pointed at one particular race, but we look at it holistically. We have to do better. My colleagues must get educated a lot more about understanding what critical race theory is—literally the ideology of simply thinking broadly about race. That's what my belief is.

COLE: Are you aware that there was a book, The 1619 Project, that received the Pulitzer—an award-winning professor wrote a book about slavery. In that book, she details the history of slavery. That book led to this critical race theory assault. Are you aware of that?

J.D. JOHNSON: She also was in jeopardy of losing her tenure, I think as well, simply because she brought up and made aware—and there's nothing wrong with people educating themselves. The history is the history, and everybody always says that if you don't know your history, then you certainly won't know your future. So we have to make sure that it's okay to educate yourself even if it's a bad history and even if it's history that makes you feel a little uncomfortable. That way we know it won't repeat itself. It's always important. It's not an attack on anyone. It's simply an ideology to open your mind, to read, and to have understanding so that we can move forward and move beyond the barriers that now exist. But unfortunately, people like to bury their heads in the sand and pretend like nothing ever happened and that the problems that exist are only the problems of the people that made them themselves right now without addressing things that happened in the past that led up to who you are today. Everything that you have done in the past will impact what you do in the future. That's all what we're trying to do—help people think critically.

COLE: Are you concerned that the history of slavery is one of the reasons that we see this attack on tenure and the banning of books in our schools?

J.D. JOHNSON: Sure, it's one of the factors. Because, again, people don't want to talk about slavery. It makes people feel uncomfortable. And because they feel uncomfortable and because they're fragile, they think children are just as fragile as them. So they want to make sure that their children don't feel the way they feel, so they want to isolate the children from the history that created this country. They get a little intimidated, they get a little nervous, and they want to bubble wrap their children hoping that will make them better people because they only have a one-sided thought process—a singular thought process.

REPRESENTATIVE REYNOLDS: I believe that each and every one of us has a duty to be truthful, transparent, and honest. I believe in speaking truth to power. Let's be honest about what SB 18 is. This is an extremist, MAGA bill that is designed to stop "wokeness." It is a partisan bill—a solution in search of a problem. This is a bill on the false notion that we are going to target those professors—those liberal college professors that are indoctrinating students on issues concerning race, gender, sexuality, and issues impacting the LGBTQ community. This is our way of silencing them so that they don't indoctrinate these young students to be liberal. That is what this bill is designed to do. It is absolutely appalling that we would try to stifle free speech.

Colleges and universities are there to teach, regardless of the subject matter, accurate history. We can't whitewash what we don't like. We can't whitewash things that we aren't proud of. We know that there are many atrocities and many injustices that happened in this country. America's original sin was slavery. Yes, there was a time that we had slaves and that we had Jim Crow laws. We can't Etch-A-Sketch that and make it go away by not talking about it or trying to have alternative language about it. It is what it is. Whether we are comfortable with it or not—it happened. Our students have a sense of learning. It helps them to understand so that we can adapt. Then we can understand and learn from our past mistakes. This is something that we should promote. We should be celebrating the fact that students are there in higher education and they're learning. Because the only way that you prevent mistakes from the past is to learn from it so you don't repeat it. I'm afraid, members, that unfortunately we are going backwards when we have made tremendous progress.

I want to make sure that we as a body—we owe it to all students and faculty to protect free speech and not go after them for partisan politics or allow them to be political pawns used to score cheap political points. We are better than that. This bill is one of those bills that does that—just like the bill that we did yesterday of ending diversity, equity, and inclusion. There are so many issues that we should be focusing on that we sidestep—issues that people really care about like making sure that we have Medicaid expansion and commonsense gun reform legislation as we enter the one-year anniversary of the 21 that lost their lives in Uvalde. Those are the things that we should be focusing on—access to health care and making sure teachers have a pay raise, making sure that we have a livable wage, climate change and clean air, and addressing criminal justice reforms and system disparities in our criminal justice system. Yet we are focused on hyper-partisan issues that only divide us.

Now, tenure is as American as anything else having been around American campuses since the early 1900s. We have heard in committee from faculty around the state that the passage of this bill will run our top talent away from this state. They are going to go to other states. If you want them to go to California and New York—who we are always railing against—then that's what this bill is going to do. Just in this past decade, Texas now possesses more Tier 1 and Tier 2 universities and added more Tier 1 and Tier 2 universities than any other state in the country. These tiers are measured in PhDs granted in research expenditures per year.

Members, I want to make clear that these accomplishments of our state are because of our faculty and the talent we cultivate and attract in Texas. In 2020, total research expenditures from Texas higher education institutions amounted in $6.3 billion. These are billions of competitive dollars that our industry-leading faculty bring in every year to our schools. Fifty percent of the faculty at UT Austin and 70 percent at A&M are either tenured or on the tenure track, as common for Tier 1 doctoral universities. This is the real kicker though—despite Texas having the highest population of African Americans at 13.2 percent of the population, African Americans roughly only make up 4.5 percent of full-time faculty at UT Austin. Texas A&M is even worse at less than 3.6 percent. When it comes to tenured staff, it's even worse than that—only a measly 4 percent of the tenured faculty in the entire State of Texas is African American. We are already a minority when it comes to tenured faculty, and legislation like SB 18 is going to drive these numbers down even further.

I cannot imagine we would want to attack a pillar of higher education that is essential to learning. Our tenured faculty have tenure in name only. When it comes to leadership and what they are doing, it is systemically halting our acceleration as a national leader of top talent and academic innovation. We are supposed to be the greatest state in the country—and we are—but what we are doing is merely setting us back and we must do better. I ask you—I urge you to do the right thing, to be statesmen, to be above the partisan politics, and do what is in the best interest of students, faculty, and staff. I heard from college professors, and they were unequivocally against SB 18. I heard from many students at The University of Texas, Texas A&M, and other universities that were opposed to it and that waited hours to testify.

This is going to have a disparate impact. This is going to drive those numbers down. This, members, is wrong, and I urge you to do the right thing. I'll end with a quote by Dr. King. He said it best, "The ultimate measure of a man is not where he stands during times of comfort and convenience, but where he stands during times of challenge and controversy." I know that we are in a time of challenge and controversy, with all the hyper-partisan politics in D.C. But don't let that penetrate to Austin. Don't let that penetrate to the Capitol. I love this body and the fact that we can work together in a bipartisan basis, work together side by side and do what is best for Texas. Democrats, republicans, independents, African Americans, Hispanics, and Asians. This is what makes us better. United we stand, divided we fall. This bill needs to be voted down. Thank you.

REPRESENTATIVE MANUEL: I have a couple of quick questions. One of them is, do you believe that affirmative action was put in place to make sure that we are learning from one another and so that we're around different communities rather than just being insular with one type or one group of people?

REYNOLDS: Absolutely. Our diversity is our strength. When we come together in an environment, we help bring a better understanding so that we can end false notions, myths, and things that we see on the media, like that all Blacks are this or all whites are that. I have to educate people that have only been around one race that no, all white people are not prejudiced or all Black people are not criminals or all Asians are not this or all Hispanics are not that. When we come together in a higher-learning environment around people of different races, of different ethnicities, and of different faiths, it helps us to better understand so that we learn from them. As a Christian, I've learned from my Muslim brothers and sisters, and that helps me to be a well-rounded person and I can dismiss those notions that they are terrorists.

AMENDMENT NO. 2 - REMARKS

REPRESENTATIVE MARTINEZ FISCHER: As I understand, this is a proposal that just impacts Harris County. Is that correct?

REPRESENTATIVE REYNOLDS: It's only Harris County and Harris County alone.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: And as I understand it, this is an amendment to get an additional concession that the local county commissioners, the local government authorities—this is something they think they need?

REYNOLDS: Yes.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: In the greater context, we have these proposals that are going to create new laws. This proposal combined with another proposal makes it difficult for Harris County to do anything without being subject to some kind of oversight. Is that why you are saying, "Well, we better get what we need now because we might not be able to do it when we go home?"

REYNOLDS: Absolutely.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: Tell me about that. What is the conversation? Why does the county feel like they need extra implementation time? Is there something going on this fall?

REYNOLDS: Well, absolutely. Within the City of Houston, they have an election that will take place in November. A municipal election—one of the biggest elections in the city. It's a new mayor, and they have city council races. There is going to be a large anticipated turnout. They are going to have to conduct these elections within Harris County—the only county that this bill would impact.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: I can't remember, but is it also November that we'll be doing the constitutional amendment elections as well?

REYNOLDS: That's in addition to that. That is correct.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: Some of the constitutional amendments we are anticipating are massive property tax cuts, and I think there is a constitutional amendment for establishing a permanent fund for the non-UT, non-A&M schools. In other words, maybe University of Houston has access to a fund of money. There are a lot of important proposals, and they will be voting in the same election?

REYNOLDS: That is correct.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: Then I guess the concern is if we don't have implementation time, then we could have problems administering this election.

REYNOLDS: That is precisely correct. If we implement these changes, this is going to potentially impact their ability to get everything ready in time for the election. That is why we are simply asking for a delay in the implementation so that it does not impact—have an adverse impact—among those potential voters. I already called out military voters, seniors, and students. This could have catastrophic consequences. It could end up as an effective form of voter suppression.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: Just so I'm following the logic, I think whether we agree or not—I don't happen to agree on this policy, I think it's bad policy—we are here because there are allegations that mistakes were made. Whether they are true or not, that's the purpose of this bill. There have been some elections mistakes made, therefore we are going to take this authority away from this elections administrator. Now, we have the local government officials who will be charged with administering the next election saying, "We need more time. If we don't get more time, mistakes might be made." Shouldn't we be listening and giving deference or heeding those warnings from local officials?

REYNOLDS: Absolutely. Unequivocally. You are absolutely right. We want to make sure that they have sufficient time so that they are able to implement what this bill does and ensure that no one is left out. Everyone has the ability to get this information out. We are simply saying, "Let's delay it a little bit." That's all it does.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: We are talking about delaying it from when to when?

REYNOLDS: This amendment would delay it until after this November's election. That's it.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: So it would still happen this year, potentially?

REYNOLDS: Yes, it would still happen this year.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: You're not trying to push it off past the presidential primaries or the general election?

REYNOLDS: No. This is a reasonable, short-term pause so that we can get it right in Harris County.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: What's the effect? Sixty days is what we are talking about?

REYNOLDS: That's all we are talking about. That's a very short period of time to ensure that we do it right. Why would we want to rush and then possibly negatively impact citizens? The most fundamental right we have in this democracy that we have in America is the precious fundamental right to vote. Far too many people died for that right. We are the bastion of hope around this globe because we protect and value our democracy. Voting is the most precious fundamental right that have. Why would we want to jeopardize anyone's right to vote?

MARTINEZ FISCHER: Seems like a reasonable amendment. What is the feedback from the author? Is this something that the author is willing to take?

REYNOLDS: No, unfortunately not. I believe the author is going to oppose the amendment, and I urge members to reject that and vote for the amendment.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: It would seem to me that if this amendment wasn't acceptable, or should you not prevail—I mean it's third reading, high bar—maybe there should be other guardrails which is the magic word of this session, to maybe hold harmless local government officials for this next election. Because there is always going to be this implementation phase. Even for the general laws that we pass here, there is an implementation phase. It almost seems like this is consistent. You're not asking for anything that's inconsistent with what we do in other areas of the law, right?

REYNOLDS: Not at all. I don't think this is a stretch. This is a modest request. I think to err on the side of caution—a short-term delay to make sure that they have a chance to implement the new changes and not impact the current election that's coming up in November. This is a short pause. They can still pass the bill that would not impact the next primary and general election. I think what you just said is absolutely correct.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: I guess the concern that I heard in the debate is if this becomes law, Harris County will have an election, and those duties and responsibilities will be in two different departments. Do you know what that looks like? Has there even been a discussion on the division of labor, or where the employees go, or—I understand there are allegations about not having the right amount of paper at certain polling stations. I mean, do we even have those logistics figured out?

REYNOLDS: You know, Chairman Martinez Fischer, I've had conversations with some of those folks in Harris County. I believe that this bill is going to cause a lot of uncertainty. They're going to have to adapt and get up to speed and do their due diligence, but in the meantime, they need time to make those necessary changes. They need time to restaff and retool those departments. This is an amendment that would allow them that ample time. If we want to make sure that our voting is efficient and the intent of this bill is really to address a problem, then let's pause a short-term—like we said, about 60 days and give them the time to get everything together. Let them get past this November election. And then they would have sufficient time to work this bill out.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: I was looking forward to finishing our conversation. We were gaveled out earlier. I believe perhaps we should put this exchange in the journal because what I'm worried about is—I'm worried about a challenge, I'm worried about a lawsuit, I'm worried about another association of blame. I think it's important that the record reflect that the folks that are being left with this responsibility are saying, "We can't do it right now without more time." That's what your amendment is trying to do, right?

REYNOLDS: It's a simple amendment—changing the effective date from September 1 to December 31. That's it.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: I think you need a record and an affirmative defense to say—because you know somebody is going to complain. I mean, if you just follow elections in Harris County alone, it's unlike any other county in the state. Even private citizens want to take the law into their own hands and go follow trucks and go chase ballots that don't exist. I don't want someone to say we passed a law to take this authority away, and we gave it to the Harris County government, and they messed it up again. To be clear, how big is Harris County?

REYNOLDS: Harris County is larger than many states in the United States of America—nearly five million citizens. Harris County is huge. I want people across the breadth of this state to realize that this county is so large that there are going to be some potential challenges, and if you live in a rural county, then you may not be able to conceptualize the magnitude of the internal changes that are going to have to happen for this bill to take effect within Harris County—going from the elections administrator to the county clerk or the tax assessor-collector. So you're talking about millions of citizens, hundreds of thousands of changes, and thousands of employees. This bill is going to have a very consequential, significant impact on the county, so they need additional time to do it right. Why should they have to rush in haste and make mistakes that this bill is trying to fix? This bill is going to compound the problems for the current election cycle. If this was a very small county—a county that had a few thousand people, maybe a few people in the elections office—I would not be filing this amendment. But this amendment simply gives a county the size of Harris County additional time to get everything right and to do their due diligence—all the bells and whistles so that no voter is disenfranchised.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: I understand the amendment is for more time to implement, but I also understand in the larger legislation, the person or persons charged with administering the elections, they're no longer going to be around, right?

REYNOLDS: Correct. They're not going to be there.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: The legislation is ultimately to get rid of them. But I imagine if you know you're about to lose your job, you're not going to wait around. You may already be making plans to leave.

REYNOLDS: Correct.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: And who's going to assume the expertise? Who's going to assume the duties of the transition? Are we talking about somebody just leaving a set of keys on the table and saying, "It's your problem now, not mine?"

REYNOLDS: Well, essentially, Chairman Martinez Fischer, that's what could happen because if you know that you're on your way out, you're probably trying to find your next job. You're not interested in sticking around and trying to solve some additional problems and trying to help the next people. You're trying to find a way to feed your family and take care of yourself. So I would think that the person, as they listen to this bill, they're probably already shopping their resume on Monster and everywhere else. They're trying to find headhunters to get their next gig. You're right, Harris County is going to have to essentially find another person to be able to do those duties and functions.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: Is it fair—in the request for additional time, I think there was some discussion about, "Well, we need computer networking, moving equipment, and moving personnel." You might even have to be finding that expertise. I imagine in Harris County there might not be anybody in the county clerk's office now that's just been waiting for three years to one day take over elections. Are they going to be looking for personnel?

REYNOLDS: Absolutely. It's not a far stretch to think that they're going to have to go out and find people to fulfill that role when the current tax assessor and county clerk were not expecting or anticipating having these duties to implement the elections process. I think you're right. They're going to need additional time to find someone that has that expertise. They're going to then have to let that person get accustomed to all of the different nuances within the department—personnel, staffing up, and the IT changes that we just talked about for effective implementation. Those things take time. This amendment builds guardrails to give them that time so that we pause shortly. Again, September 1 to December 31 so it doesn't impact the current elections cycle.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: If this amendment doesn't get on, is there any hold harmless provision in there that will protect somebody from being unfairly criticized or culpable for not pulling off an election? I guess what I'm asking is if giving Harris County more time is really an outcry to say that we can't guarantee that the election is going to be the way it should be, and you don't give me that time, is there anything else in the bill that's going to protect the county from the blame game that will likely come?

REYNOLDS: Chairman Martinez Fischer, I looked at the bill, and I didn't see any of those protections. In fact, if the bill had that, it would be less harmful, but there is no hold harmless provision in there. There will be additional finger pointing that I anticipate will happen after the implementation of this bill. But instead of an elections administrator, that criticism will be targeted at county clerk, and that criticism will be targeted at the tax assessor-collector.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: Maybe that makes sense for an additional amendment were this amendment to fail. Maybe you consider an amendment to hold harmless for a transition period. It won't stop the elections from going forward under this new structure, but it certainly will put the guardrail in place to say we saw this coming. Plan A was to get an extension of time, which is what your amendment does. Plan B would be, "Okay, if we're going to do it your way, don't blame us if you don't like the outcome."

REYNOLDS: Absolutely, Chairman Martinez Fischer. I think that would be only fair and equitable considering what this bill's implementation will likely do. Absolutely.

MARTINEZ FISCHER: And is there any motive? Sometimes maybe not accepting the amendment might be, "Well, we just want to concur," or, "If we take another amendment, we have to vet it." What's the rationale for getting what's essentially a 90-day extension?

REYNOLDS: I pondered that, and I can't come up with anything that would be logical or that would make good sense that would be in the best interest of the citizens of Harris County or the elected officials that would have to be responsible for these changes.

SB 2315 ON THIRD READING (Clardy - House Sponsor)

SB 2315, A bill to be entitled An Act relating to the creation of a task force to develop a plan for the consolidation of the functions of workforce development programs administered by the Texas Workforce Commission and social services programs administered by the Health and Human Services Commission.

SB 2315 - POINT OF ORDER

Representative Zwiener raised a point of order against further consideration of SB 2315 under Rule 8, Section 1(a)(1), of the House Rules.

(Patterson in the chair)

The speaker overruled the point of order, announcing his decision to the house as follows:

Ms. Zwiener raises a point of order against further consideration of SB 2315 under Rule 8, Section 1(a)(1), on the grounds that the caption of the bill fails to give reasonable notice of the subject of the bill.

Ms. Zwiener argues that the bill's requirement that the proposed task force identify any changes to federal law needed to implement any plan it recommends to the legislature is not reflected in the caption and that it should be included because the provision implicitly authorizes lobbying of the Congress for any recommended changes.

A caption need not detail all elements of the bill. See 78 H. Jour. 1676 (2003). Here, the identification of changes is a subset of the required elements for a recommended plan. The plan is referenced by the caption. Therefore, the caption complies with the rule.

Accordingly, the point of order is respectfully overruled.

Amendment No. 1

Representative Button offered the following amendment to SB 2315:

Amend SB 2315 on third reading, in SECTION 2 of the bill, in added Section 319.003(b), Labor Code, as amended by Floor Amendment No. 1 by Button on second reading, by striking the following subdivision and renumbering the subdivisions of the subsection accordingly:

(____) determine whether recipients of program services are attaining employment paying a self-sufficient wage, as determined under Section 2308A.012, Government Code;

Amendment No. 2

Representative Raney offered the following amendment to SB 2315:

Amend SB 2315 by adding the following appropriately numbered SECTIONS to the bill and renumbering subsequent SECTIONS of the bill accordingly:

SECTION _____. Section 303.003, Labor Code, is amended by amending Subsection (h) and adding Subsection (h-1) to read as follows:

(h) A community-based organization may apply for money to participate in a training program if:

(1) the organization applies [only] in partnership with a community and technical college or the Texas A&M Engineering Extension Service; or

(2) at least 90 days before the date the organization applies, the organization submitted to a community and technical college or the Texas A&M Engineering Extension Service a written request for a partnership with the college or service and has been unable to obtain the partnership.

(h-1) If a [A] community-based organization that applies for funding under Subsection (h) provides [providing] services regulated by the state, the organization shall provide to the commission evidence of any certification, license, or registration required by law.

SECTION _____. Section 303.003, Labor Code, as amended by this Act, applies only to an application for money from the skills development fund submitted to the Texas Workforce Commission on or after the effective date of this Act. An application submitted before the effective date of this Act is governed by the law in effect on the date the application was submitted, and the former law is continued in effect for that purpose.

(8) provides for achievement of demand reductions within both summer and winter seasons; and

(c) The goals described by Subsection (a) must be calculated as a ratio by dividing the amount of load reduced at peak demand by the total amount of demand, at the same time, of all residential customers who have responsive appliances or devices at their premises that reduce the electric consumption of the customers.

(d) A transmission and distribution utility required to provide an energy efficiency incentive program under Section 39.905 may use up to 10 percent of the budgeted spending for those programs on demand response programs described by Subsection (b)(9).

SB 1717, A bill to be entitled An Act relating to the prosecution of the offense of stalking.

SB 1717 - REMARKS

REPRESENTATIVE DUTTON: I just want to be sure that—how does this bill now treat prior conduct?

REPRESENTATIVE MOODY: The prior conduct provision that in my understanding was objectionable—that portion of the bill has now been removed. I don't have that section in front of me. It was the Canales amendment when we first had it on the floor before the bill was—

DUTTON: Right, but then you put an amendment back on there.

MOODY: That amendment is the Canales amendment. It was such a good idea by Mr. Canales that I just put my own name on it.

DUTTON: And that's the only amendment that went on the bill?

MOODY: That is the only amendment that went on the bill.

DUTTON: Okay, so now prior conduct is excluded from the determination in the guilt or innocence phase?

MOODY: That portion of the bill that would have impacted prior conduct in guilt/not guilt is no longer in the bill.

DUTTON: Thank you.

SB 471 ON THIRD READING (C.J. Harris - House Sponsor)

SB 471, A bill to be entitled An Act relating to the investigation by the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality of certain complaints.

SB 471 - REMARKS

REPRESENTATIVE C.J. HARRIS: Members, this is the vexatious complaints limiting bill for TCEQ. I believe there is an amendment.

REPRESENTATIVE MORALES SHAW: This bill, SB 471, is concerning to me because of all the progress that we made on the TCEQ sunset bill. We'll see better transparency, the public will see permitting online, the TCEQ has improved tools for enforcement, and they'll have more staff and budget increases. Then we get SB 471, and to me, that is a back door to the progress that we made on that.

It authorizes and condones the dismissal of TCEQ community complaints. If the layperson finds it important or dangerous enough to find their way through the now very difficult TCEQ process to lodge a complaint about a chronic bad smell, a water pollutant, concrete plant, particulate matter causing asthma, or any other number of environmental hazards, is it realistically likely that they are making a fake complaint, or a vexatious or frivolous one? No, it's not. This bill presents to be a remedy for frivolous complaints. I just ask you who would go through tremendous obstacles and the bureaucracy to make a fake claim? I'll answer that. No one would.

Members, not one person, agency, or organization testified in support of SB 471. On the other hand, people traveled from across the state, they waited, and they stood strongly against this measure to dismiss their claims and cancel their voices. They came from people who owned rural land and people who lived in urban areas. We had a mixture of young and elderly people. And these are people who have gone through the bureaucratic process. They've experienced how it is to make a complaint with TCEQ. This is a real concern. Members, I just feel it is really important to come up here, and because those people took the time to come out and testify, I think it's important for their voice to be heard today here on the floor by all of you.

Even TCEQ has handled complaints effectively, and they couldn't say that they needed this measure. In fact, this is from the TCEQ: "Without the input from concerned public diligent citizens who came forward, many of the industry violations would not be discovered and remedied." This makes the unknowing public safer, protects our precious resources, and calls out bad actors. And this bill is really—when you talk about complaints at the TCEQ, you are not talking about all the industry players because there are a lot of industry players that are good. They take precautions. They care. They do everything they are supposed to do to protect people and the environment, but there are bad actors. That's who people take the time to go through the process and complain about. I hope that because we are going to pass SB 471 now, I hope that the TCEQ does not use it often to dismiss these consumer complaints—or community complaints, your neighbors—because to me it is the antithesis of the progress that we made. I thank you for your time in listening to this.

REPRESENTATIVE CANALES: I was reading the original bill. Does it still contain a provision that they're able to dismiss a client if it was filed within the preceding seven years?

C.J. HARRIS: That's the same person in the preceding seven years. I clarified this this morning—that it's on the same property, same complaint.

CANALES: Seven years is a significant amount of time. Walk me through somebody making a complaint. It was dismissed? Or it was addressed, and then if somebody files a subsequent complaint within seven years, they don't even have to look at it?

C.J. HARRIS: No, sir. The point here—and what I'd like to do is give you a prime example of one particular site where I specifically asked TCEQ, "What exactly are we solving here?" There's one site that over four years had 1,823 complaints. They investigated those complaints 89 times, and there were only three notices of violation issued. These are the same complaints on the same property. TCEQ goes out and inspects them. They do hope to find instances that they can correct, but it is obvious when there are truly vexatious complainants. Those are the situations we're talking about here.

CANALES: I'm not in disagreement that we need to figure out a way to minimize vexatious complaints, and the agency needs the authority. I don't believe, by any stretch of the imagination, your bill is not going to pass. But the example that you just gave is an extreme example. I do believe that if somebody makes a complaint and it doesn't necessarily rise to the level of an enforcement, but maybe it's getting there and somebody brings up that same complaint and it got there in two years, they would just be able to dismiss this without looking at it?

C.J. HARRIS: In my discussions with TCEQ, I don't think they would dismiss it without looking at it because their intent is to investigate legitimate complaints. It's specifically dealing with these repeat offenders, for lack of a better word, who are eating up time. That example that I just gave you—in the hours that TCEQ keeps track of, it was over 43,000 hours. Now, I want to be clear in that we're not eliminating or restricting the number of times anyone can complain. As a matter of fact, TCEQ right now is going through the process of making it easier for the public to complain through a sunset review process during the interim—that was a suggestion made. The intent is not to deter or inhibit the public's ability to complain at all. It's specifically for these people who are abusive in their complaints.

CANALES: I hear what you're saying. You're not prohibiting anybody from complaining, but what we're doing is creating a methodology where the complaint doesn't have to get listened to if they feel it's been repetitive.

C.J. HARRIS: In certain circumstances, yes.

CANALES: And those circumstances mean that there's "no reasonable probability that they could substantiate the complaint, the complaint was repetitious or redundant, or certain other unsubstantiated complaints investigated in the preceding 12 months." That's kind of vague. You don't believe that that's vague? "Certain other unsubstantiated complaints"?

C.J. HARRIS: I think that it could be construed as vague until you look into these specific cases and you hear directly from TCEQ on what their intention behind this is and how they truly are trying to go after the bad actors. These vexatious complainants tie up so much time and resources in TCEQ that the concern is that now they're not able to adequately respond to the legitimate complaints that need to be addressed.

CANALES: No doubt. I agree with you. I think TCEQ is underfunded, and the honor of my life has been to serve on Sunset. I've worked with TCEQ and the Sunset staff. But what concerns me about this bill is that TCEQ is "not required to provide information about policies or procedures relating to the complaint, investigation, resolution, or notice of the investigation status to the complainant who filed the complaint that met the above criteria." So if you've got a complaint that TCEQ—you make a complaint and they decided that they're dismissing it based on this bill, they don't even have to tell you. There's no transparency there. They don't even have to send the person notice. Who's watching the henhouse? It's the fox watching the henhouse. When a citizen of the State of Texas makes a complaint—whether TCEQ considers it repetitive or not—under this bill they don't have anybody to explain to, they don't have anybody to respond to, and there's no record of why, who, what, where, or when. Where's the accountability?

Assuming, arguendo, that you're right and we're here to prevent these things, how are we supposed to know if I've been considered a vexatious complainant? How am I supposed to know if TCEQ has dismissed my complaint because they think it's unsubstantiated? This bill completely alleviates the agency from even notifying the complainant. Do you not see how that might create a situation where the person is going to keep filing the complaint because they don't know what the heck's happening?

C.J. HARRIS: I do understand, theoretically, where the problem could arise. I think the need and the basis for this bill is definitely warranted. As we look over the next two years after this is implemented, hopefully we come back—

CANALES: I don't disagree with you, I don't disagree with the concept of the bill, and I don't disagree that there's serial complainants. But perhaps you're going to exacerbate the problem when they don't even have to respond to a complainant which might give rise to the person complaining about it again because they never got a response. And since they didn't get a response, guess what? They're going to file it again. And so because you have no accountability for the agency to even answer the person that made the complaint, it may give rise to them continuing to file more complaints.

C.J. HARRIS: Sure. I think the point though is that if you have 1,800 complaints on the same location, TCEQ goes out, conducts their investigation, begins a course of action to take corrective measures on that site, and the complaints continue to roll in after that, even though it was corrected—that's what we're trying to address.

CANALES: I agree. That example is great, but that's one of the extreme examples. I'll take you back to what it says—that they're "not required to investigate a complaint if a complaint could be addressed during other TCEQ activities." Okay, take that. That's not even a vexatious complaint. The bill allows them to not investigate a complaint if the complaint could be addressed during other TCEQ activities. Under that provision, if I made a complaint—I'm not even a vexatious complainant, I haven't made multiple complaints—the agency, within its own authority feels we can address this during other activities, does not have to respond to me or let me know. So even if it was my first complaint, under this provision of the bill, the agency doesn't even tell me. It's going to make me file another complaint. I think what the flaw is in the bill and I think what it creates is a situation—the intent is great—where the lack of responsibility by the agency to even respond to a vexatious complaint, to even tell the person why we're not looking at it—a simple letter or e-mail that says, "we can address this during other TCEQ activities" or "there's no reasonable probability of us fixing this"—anything. But what we're doing is there's no accountability by a state agency to the citizens of Texas when they file a complaint to let them know what the heck is happening to their complaint. Theoretically, the agency, through this bill—stuff can just go into limbo forever. You're creating a situation where people who have made a complaint, even a genuine complaint, are going to have a lack of understanding. They're not going to know what happened to their complaint. They're not going to know what's going on. The agency doesn't have any accountability to the people complaining. All they've got to do is respond and say, "well, we didn't think it could be addressed" or "we thought it could be addressed in our normal activities." I think the provision of the bill that gives me the most heartburn, Representative, is when it says, "you are not required to provide information about the policies or the procedures relating to the complaint and the investigation resolution, or notice at all that such a complaint was filed." I think there's a problem.

SB 833 - POINT OF ORDER

Representative J.E. Johnson raised a point of order against further consideration of SB 833 under Rule 4, Section 32(c)(1), of the House Rules.

The speaker overruled the point of order, announcing his decision to the house as follows:

Ms. Johnson of Dallas raises a point of order against further consideration of SB 833 under Rule 4, Section 32(c)(1), on the grounds that the bill analysis is substantially or materially misleading.

Ms. Johnson notes that the background and purpose statement repeatedly uses the term "insurance company" to describe the class of entities affected by the bill. She notes that the bill also applies to "other entit[ies] authorized to engage in the business of insurance in this state" and that the statement does not identify these entities.

The background and purpose statement may use terms colloquially as they are understood by a reader of average intelligence and that use is neither substantially nor materially misleading. Here, the statement does exactly that. The analysis complies with the rule.

Accordingly, the point of order is respectfully overruled.
